A Question of Time

By James Stejskal

The CIA's most valuable spy has been compromised. Only an unconventional secret Army unit has any chance of safely extracting him from East Berlin. The Cold War is about to turn hot.

Berlin, 1979. When the CIA's most valuable spy is compromised, the Agency realises it does not have the capability to bring him to safety. If he cannot evade the dreaded East German security service, the result will be chaos and a cascade of failures throughout the Agency's worldwide operations.

Master Sergeant Kim Becker lived through the hell of Vietnam as a member of the elite Studies and Operations Group. When he lost one of his best men in a pointless operation, he began to question his mission. Now, he is serving with an even more secretive Army Special Forces unit based in Berlin on the front line of the Cold War.

The CIA turns to Becker's team of unconventional warfare specialists to pull their bacon out of the fire. Becker and his men must devise a plan to get him out by whatever means possible. It's a race against time to prepare and execute the plan while, alone in East Berlin, the agent must avoid his nemesis and play for time inside the hostile secret service headquarters he has betrayed. One question remains — is the man worth the risk?

Between Five Eyes

Fifty Years Inside the Five Eyes Intelligence Community

By Anthony R. Wells Foreword by Admiral the Lord West of Spithead GCB DSC PC

A detailed look at 50 years of change in UK-US intelligence, by the only living person to have worked for British Intelligence as a British citizen and US Intelligence as a US citizen.

"Few people are as uniquely well-equipped as Anthony Wells to write an account of these close and special relationships. His penetrating and informed analysis offers us all hope for the continuance of an alliance which makes the world a safer place."

– Vice Admiral Sir Jeremy Blackham, Knight Commander of the Bath, editor, The Naval Review

UK-US intelligence and the wider Five Eyes community of Canada, Australia and New Zealand is primarily about one main thing, relationships. In this remarkable book, Anthony Wells charts fifty years of change, turmoil, intense challenges, successes and failures, and never-ending abiding UK-US and Five Eyes relationships. He traces the development of institutions that he firmly believes have sustained and indeed may have saved the free world, Western democracies and their allies from those ill disposed to the value system and culture of our nations.

More than a chronology of the UK-US intelligence community during this fifty-year period, it is also a personal insight into key relationships and the abiding strength of the United States and the United Kingdom and its Five Eyes allies, relationships. As a fully trained and accredited security officer for two US intelligence organisations, Anthony R. Wells has relied on his own extensive unclassified collection of papers, personal notes, diaries, as well as his family library for source material to create this book.

After the Wall Came Down

The British Army and its Soldiers After the Cold War

By Andrew Richards

A history of the British Army since the end of the Cold War, incorporating many firsthand accounts.

The generation of young men and women who joined the British Army during the mid to late 1980s would serve their country during an unprecedented period of history. Unlike the two world war generations, they would never face total war – there was never any declaration of war and there was no one single country to defeat. In fact, it was supposed to have been the end of a war, a time of peace and stability. Politicians started to use the term, Peace Dividend, with government officials even planning on how and where it should be spent.

But for those in the military, the two decades following the end of the Cold War would not be a time of peace. Government spending and the size of the military was reduced but the Army's commitments increased exponentially. Those serving not only faced continuous deployment in overseas operations, they would also be involved in immense upheavals that took place within the army.

When the Berlin Wall came down, the British Army had not changed for decades. The ending of the Cold War, combined with a technological revolution, a changing society at home, and new global threats mean that the Army of the second decade of the 21st century – the army this generation of soldiers is now retiring from – is unrecognisable from the one they joined in the late 1980s. This is the story of the soldiers who served in the British Army in those tumultuous decades.

Romans at War

An In-Depth Study of the Roman Military in the Republic and Empire

By Simon Elliott

A sumptuously illustrated account of the Roman military in the republican and imperial periods, looking at how the army was developed, and how it trained and equipped its soldiers.

The Roman military machine was pre-eminent in the ancient world, projecting power across the known world over a vast chronology, and an increasing huge and diverse geography. One of the most powerful instruments of war in the history of conflict, it proved uniquely adept at learning from setbacks, always coming back the stronger for it. In so doing it displayed two of the most important traits associated with the world of Rome. Firstly grit, that key ability to remain steadfast and to overcome adversity, even in the most challenging of circumstances, as faced for example by the Republic in the Second Punic War against Hannibal. Secondly, the ability to copy the successful technical and tactical innovations of their enemies, enabling the Roman military to always stay one step ahead of its opponents on campaign and in battle.

In this grand tour covering every aspect of the Roman military, leading expert Dr Simon Elliott first provides a detailed background to the Roman Republic and Empire to provide context for all that follows. He then looks specifically at the Roman military in its three key chronological phases: the Republic, the Principate Empire and the Dominate Empire. Next he forensically examines specific examples of the Roman military on campaign and in battle, and of its engineering prowess. Finally, he examines the many enemies faced by the Roman Republic and Empire. This all provides a firm structure to enable the reader to come to grips with this incredible military machine, one whose exploits still resonate in the world to this very day.

Medieval Military Combat

Battle Tactics and Fighting Techniques of the Wars of the Roses

By Tom Lewis

A concise and entertaining explanation of the battle techniques of the medieval period. It offers a clear analysis of the different types of soldier and shows how other accounts, and popular culture such as films, have mis-represented medieval warfare.

We don't know how medieval soldiers fought. Did they just walk forward in their armour, to smash each other with their maces and poleaxes, for hours on end, as depicted on film in programs such as Game of Thrones? They could not have done so. It is impossible to fight in such a manner for more than several minutes as exhaustion becomes a preventative factor. Indeed, we know more of how the Roman and Greek armies fought than we do of the 1300 to 1550 period. So how did medieval soldiers in the Wars of the Roses, and in the infantry sections of battles such as Agincourt and Towton, carry out their grim work?

Medieval Military Combat shows, for the first time, the techniques of such battles. It also breaks new ground in establishing medieval battle numbers as highly exaggerated, and that we need to look again at the accounts of actions such as the famous battle of Towton, which this work uses as a basic for its overall study. This books shows for the first time the battle techniques of the medieval period and re-examines the sources for battle numbers. It analyses the different types of soldier: bowmen, swordsmen, spearmen, and plated men-at-arms.

On Her Majesty's Nuclear Service

By Eric Thompson

New in paperback edition of the first ever memoir by a Royal Navy nuclear submarine officer, this is the inside story of the men who ensured that 'Mutually Assured Destruction' was maintained at all times during the Cold War.

In his journey, the author leads the reader through top-secret submarine patrols, hush-hush scientific trials, underwater weapon developments, public relations battles with nuclear protesters, arm-wrestling with politicians and the changing roles of females and homosexuals in the Navy. It is essentially a human story, rich in both drama and comedy, like the Russian spy trawler that played dance music at passing submarines. There was never a dull moment.

The Final Archives of the Führerbunker

Berlin in 1945, the Chancellery and the last days of Hitler

By Paul Vallatoux and Xavier Aiolfi

A unique snapshot not only into the last days of the Third Reich but also into Berlin following the end of World War II, including descriptions and diagrams of the bunker where Hitler oversaw the disintegration of his armies in April 1945, and an account of the last days there.

In November 1945, two French officers secretly entered the Führerbunker, the air raid shelter near the Chancellery in Berlin. The bunker was the last home of Adolf Hitler, the background of the last months of his life, and the war, where he married Eva Braun on April 29, 1945, and where he killed himself less than two days later. In the middle of a heap of furniture and broken objects, the two officers found hundreds of documents littering the ground.

Among the documents that they retrieved were a dozen telegrams of historic importance that allow us to understand the spirit of the last leaders of the Third Reich as well as the events that took place between April 23 and 26, 1945. These and other documents are gathered for the first time in this book, presented in their proper context and with an expert commentary. The book includes photographs of the documents that survived the fires set in the bunker at the Chancellery in Berlin in April 1945, from the last orders sent out to drawings by Bormann's children.

Sharks of the Air

NEW IN PAPERBACK

Willy Messerschmitt and the Development of History's First Operational Jet Fighter

By James Neal Harvey

The story of Willy Messerschmitt's life, showing how this aeronautical genius built many revolutionary airplanes.

In July 1944 the Allies were stunned by the appearance of the Messerschmitt Me-262, the world's first operational jet warplane. This new German fighter was more than 100mph faster than any other aircraft in the skies. Although always greatly outnumbered, the Me-262 gained scores of victories over Allied fighters and bombers, and by the end of the war, many of the Luftwaffe's greatest aces had clamoured to be in their cockpits. No wonder military leaders believed that if it had been introduced earlier, this jet could have changed the outcome of the war.

Sharks of the Air tells the story of Willy Messerschmitt's life, and shows how this aeronautical genius built many revolutionary airplanes – not excluding the Luftwaffe's mainstay, the Me-109 – and culminating in the Me-262. It describes how his various warplanes fought in Spain, Poland, France, Britain, the U.S.S.R., and over Germany, and it provides thrilling accounts of air battles drawn from combat reports and interviews with veterans.

This book also shows how Messerschmitt – like other geniuses such as Porsche, von Braun, and Speer – was affected by cutthroat Nazi politics, and describes his intense rivalries with other aircraft designers. It reveals aspects of his life never before made public, including his love affair with the beautiful Baroness Lilly Michel-Rolino, a rich aristocrat who left her husband to live with Willy. And finally it shows how in World War II Messerschmitt believed he was loyally supporting the Fatherland, until he realised too late that Hitler was a madman. Like many of the technical innovations of Nazi Germany in the war, production arrived too late in order to change the final outcome. If Messerschmitt had been given free rein from the start, however, Allied air superiority might never have occurred.

Widowmaker

Living and Dying with the Corsair

By Tim Hillier-Graves

Covers the development of the Corsair for the US Navy, why it was condemned for carrier use and how British pilots used it.

"Despite everything I felt very lucky to have flown Corsairs, they were the best you know, even though it took me sometime to realise this when so many friends died flying them." – Colin Facer, Corsair pilot, HMS Illustrious

The Vought-Sikorsky Corsair was one of the most potent fighters of the World War II. It was also one of the most flawed. Conceived by Rex Beisel, Vought's Chief Designer during 1938, the US Navy condemned it as being too dangerous for carrier operations and refused to certify it safe for use at sea. By the end of the war the Fleet Air Arm had acquired more than 2,000 Corsairs to equip its squadrons. But the risks identified by the USN were largely ignored by the Royal Navy and far too many men and aircraft were lost in accidents as a result. Yet in the hands of experienced carrier pilots its virtues were only too apparent and, in due course, they achieved great things. Eventually, the US Navy noted this 'success' and certified the Corsair for use on their carriers too, but the aircraft never entirely lost its reputation as a 'widow maker.'

As well as discussing the work and vision of chief designer, Rex Beisel, this book looks at how the determination of young pilots transformed the Corsair from an aircraft considered too dangerous to fly from carriers into a successful carrier fighter. This book describes the Corsair's development and tells the sad, but inspiring story of the young men who struggled and suffered to make the Corsair a going concern in the most vicious unforgiving war one can imagine. To do this the author met and corresponded with ninety or more veterans from America, Britain, New Zealand and Canada. Their recollections made this book possible and through their vivid memories we can experience what it felt like to be barely of age, a civilian called to arms and a fighter pilot.

The Russian Civil War, 1918–1921

An Operational-Strategic Sketch of the Red Army's Combat Operations

Edited by A. S. Bubnov, S. S. Kamenev, M. N.

Tukhachevskii and R. P. Eideman

This edition translated and edited by Richard W. Harrison

The first English translation of an official Soviet history of the Russian Civil War first published in the late 1920s, released to commemorate 100 years since the Civil War.

The Russian Civil War was one of the most fateful of the 20th century's military conflicts, a bloody three-year struggle whose outcome saw the establishment of a totalitarian communist regime within the former Russian Empire. As such, it commands the attention of the military specialist and layman alike as we mark the one hundredth anniversary of the war's end.

This work is the third volume of the three-volume Soviet official history of the Russian Civil War, which appeared during 1928–1930, just before the imposition of Stalinist orthodoxy. While the preceding volumes focused on the minutiae of the Red Army's organisational development and military art, this volume provides an in-depth description and analysis of the of the civil war's major operations along the numerous fronts, from the North Caucasus, the Don and Volga rivers, the White Sea area, the Baltic States and Ukraine, as well as Siberia and Poland. It also offers a well-argued case for the political reasons behind the Bolsheviks' military strategy and eventual success against their White opponents.

And while it is a certainly a partisan document with a definite political bias, it is at the same time a straightforward military history that manages to avoid many of the hoary myths that later came to dominate the subject. As such, it is easily the most objective account of the struggle to emerge from the Soviet Union before the collapse of the communist system in 1991.

How to Win a War

Perspectives on Transforming Victory into Winning Through History

Edited by Matthias Strohn

Using a series of historical case studies, experts explore what actually is winning in a military context.

What does it mean to win a war? How does this differ from a simple military victory? How have different cultures and societies answered these questions through history, and how can we apply these lessons? When considering how a war might be 'won', there are three big ideas that underpin how success can be measured: ownership; intervention for effect; and fighting for ideas. This book examines the constituent parts of what may comprise 'victory' or 'winning' in war and then travels, chronologically, through a wide variety of historical case studies, further exploring these philosophical components and weaving them into a factual discussion.

Sturmgeschütz Brigade 236

An Assault Gun Regiment Fighting to the End

By Tino Von Struckmann

A day-by-day account of life on the Eastern Front in the last months of the war for an assault gun brigade.

The assault gun played an important role during World War II, with assault gun units significantly increasing the combat effectiveness of infantry units. The Sturmgeschütz-Brigade 236 was only in existence for the last two years of war, but proved itself a small, professional, determined and well-led unit. Researched with the help of the museum for the Sturmgeschütz-Brigade 236, this book retells the story of the unit through the translated war diary for the unit, complemented by the personal letters and diaries of the men of the unit, including material from both German and Czech archives. It is a unique insight into the story of these professional soldiers and their daily lives on the front in the last months of the war.

Tino Von Struckmann is an Army veteran, with a masters degree in military history. He is a previously published author and has been on several TV shows.

British Fighter Aircraft in World War I

Design, Construction and Innovation

By Mark C. Wilkins

Fully illustrated account of how British aircraft manufacturers vied to create the best fighter to counter German technology during World War I.

World War I witnessed unprecedented growth and innovation in aircraft design, construction, and as the war progressed – mass production. Developments in tactics and deployment also influenced design – from the early reconnaissance planes, to turn fighters, finally planes that relied upon formation tactics, speed, and firepower. Advances were so great that the post-war industry seemed bland by comparison.

This book focuses on the British approach to fighter design, construction, and mass production and is packed with hundreds of period photographs of aircraft and their construction, including many rare images. It offers a detailed narrative of how British aircraft manufacturers developed designs to better those of the enemy and covers the evolution of fighters from reconnaissance aircraft through to the first proper fighter aircraft.

Bagration

The Soviet Destruction of German Army Group Centre 1944

By Ian Baxter

Bagration is still relatively unknown but it was crucial and one of the deadliest battles of WW2 with nearly half a million killed.

The story of the destruction of Army Group Center during the summer of 1944 has been completely overshadowed by the D-Day campaign in Normandy three weeks earlier. Yet, the battle in which the German forces endured on the Eastern Front that fateful summer was more catastrophic than that experienced by the Allies on the Western Front. This book reveals the lesser-known battle in the East and shows how the German forces fought and lost against overwhelming odds. This illustrated account is packed with rare and previously unpublished photographs.

Air War on the Eastern Front

By Mike Guardia

A lavishly illustrated account of the entire air campaign on the Eastern Front in World War II.

June 1941: Having conquered most of Western Europe, Adolf Hitler turned his attention to the vast Soviet Union. In the skies over Russia, the battle-hardened airmen of the Luftwaffe made short work of the Red Air Force during opening days of Barbarossa. To make matters worse, Stalin had executed many of his best pilots during the perennial 'purges' of the 1930s. Thus, much of the Red Air Force was destroyed on the ground before meeting the Luftwaffe in the skies. By 1944, however, the Soviet airmen had regained the initiative and fervently wrested air superiority from the now-ailing Axis Powers.

Narvik

By Alex Buchner and translated by Janice Ancker

The first English translation of this German account of the battle of Narvik, the invasion of Norway in 1940.

Published for the first time in English, this book focuses on the efforts of Group 'I' led by Eduard Dietl. This group of gebirgstruppen was landed at Narvik in early April by ten destroyers. These ships were then all sunk by the Allies. Dietl's troops were outnumbered by Allied troops but his defence utilised ammunition, food and sailors from the sunken ships and his men retook Narvik once the Allies abandoned their efforts to push the Germans out of Norway. Dietl was known as the "Hero of Narvik" due to his leadership during this campaign.

Leningrad

The Advance of Panzer Group 4, 1941

By Walter Chales de Beaulieu, edited and translated by Linden Lyons

Narrative of the advance of Panzer Group 4 towards Leningrad In 1941, available in English for the first time.

At the launch of Operation Barbarossa, Army Group North was tasked with the operational objective of Leningrad—what lay between it and the city was 800 kilometers of the Baltic states, and 18–20 infantry divisions, two cavalry divisions, and eight or nine mechanised brigades of the Red Army. It was apparent that in order to succeed they would have to race through to the western Dvina and establish a bridgehead before the Russians exploited this natural feature to organise a defensive front. Panzer Group 4, which included LVI Panzer Corps and XLI Panzer Corps, was to lead the way. By the end of the first day the group had pushed 70 kilometers into enemy territory.

Risk Taker, Spy Maker

Tales of a CIA Case Officer

By Barry Broman

The vivid and engaging memoir of a CIA case officer accompanied by a selection of his photography.

Barry Broman has led a remarkable life and met some remarkable people during his years as a Central Intelligence Agency case officer. In this book he recalls his adventures with the Associated Press, in the Marine Corps, and through a quarter century in the CIA with panache and verve. Most of his career was spent in Asia, and his text includes vivid descriptions. At times, the memoir reads like a travel book with tales of visits to little-known and rarely seen places like the Naga Hills on the India-Burma border, the world-famous but off limits jade and ruby mines of Burma, and the isolated Banda Islands of Indonesia. It includes Marines in action in Vietnam, the ravages of war in Cambodia at war, and opium buyers forcing growers to sell in Burma.

Baker Bandits

Korea's Band of Brothers

Edited by Cynthia Shelton

An anthology of first-hand accounts of the Baker Bandits – Marines on the front line of battle during the Korean War.

B-1-5 was a unique company in the Korean War. The Baker Bandits fought at Inchon, Naktong, Chosin Reservoir, Guerrilla Hunts and the many numbered hills. Emmett Shelton was a 19-year-old Marine Reservist in 1950. He was called to duty after graduating and, within six months, he was a rifleman in Korea. Following a Chosin Few reunion in the 1980s he tracked down B Company members one-by-one and started a newsletter, The Guidon, to share stories and reconnect. Baker Bandits brings together these first-hand accounts, written by the men of B-1-5 about their time in Korea: their battles, their fallen commanders, death in the foxhole, lost platoons, injuries and what happened to them after the war.

Japan Runs Wild, 1942-1943

By Peter Harmsen

The transformation that took place from 1942 to 1943, setting the Allies on a path to final victory against Japan.

The War in the Far East trilogy offers a comprehensive view of WWII in the Asia Pacific, with due emphasis on the central Japanese-American struggle, but also examining the role of the other nations engulfed in the vast showdown. In early 1942, the Japanese Army and Navy were advancing on all fronts, humiliating their US, British and Dutch foes throughout the Asia Pacific. In a matter of just months, the soldiers and sailors of the Rising Sun conquered an area bigger than Hitler's empire at its largest extent. By the end of 1943, the tables had been turned entirely and the Japanese were fighting a defensive battle along a frontline that crossed thousands of miles. This second instalment in the trilogy details this astonishing transformation.

Peter Harmsen, a foreign correspondent in East Asia for two decades, has worked for Bloomberg, the Economist Intelligence Unit, and the Financial Times. A fluent speaker of Mandarin Chinese, Harmsen is also the former bureau chief in Taiwan for French news agency AFP.

Pearl, December 7, 1941

By Daniel Allen Butler

The Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor, looking at both sides and taking the reader into the heart of the attack.

The story of how America and Japan, two nations with seemingly little over which to quarrel, let peace slip away, so that on that 'day which will live in infamy', more than 350 dive bombers, high-level bombers, torpedo planes, and fighters of the Imperial Japanese Navy did their best to cripple the United States Navy's Pacific Fleet, killing 2,403 American servicemen and civilians, and wounding another 1,178. This book offers more than superficial answers, showing how both sides blundered their way through arrogance, over-confidence, racism, bigotry, and old-fashioned human error to arrive at the moment when the Japanese were convinced that there was no alternative to war. Pearl looks at how neither side had a monopoly on heroism, courage, cowardice, or luck, as they fought to protect their nations.

Daniel Allen Butler is a maritime and military historian and a bestselling author. He is an internationally recognised authority on maritime subjects.

Portugal's Bush War in Mozambique

By Al J. Venter

A new account of how Portugal fought a bush war in Mozambique for over a decade.

Portugal was ranged against formidable odds and in the end was unable to muster the resources required to effectively take on the might of the Soviet Union and its collaborators – every single communist country on the planet and almost all of Black Africa. Yet, Al Venter argues, Portugal did not actually lose the war, and indeed fought in difficult terrain with a good degree of success over an extended period. It was radical domestic politics that heralded the end. Mozambique is once again embroiled in a guerrilla war, this time against a large force of Islamic militants, many from Somalia and some Arab countries, and unequivocally backed by Islamic State and the lessons of Mozambique's bush war are still relevant today.

The Wars of Neall Ellis, Gunship Pilot and Mercenary

By Al J. Venter

Describes the full career of this storied aerial warrior, from the bush and jungles of Africa to the forests of the Balkans and the merciless mountains of today's Afghanistan.

A former South African Air Force pilot who saw action throughout the region from the 1970s, Neall Ellis is the best-known mercenary combat aviator alive. Apart from flying Alouette helicopter gunships in Angola, he has fought in the Balkan War (for Islamic forces), flown Mi-8s for Executive Outcomes, and thereafter an Mi-8 fondly dubbed 'Bokkie' for Colonel Tim Spicer in Sierra Leone. For the past two years, as a "civilian contractor," Ellis has been flying helicopter support missions in Afghanistan, where, he reckons, he has had more close shaves than in his entire previous four-decade career. He was also the first mercenary to work hand-in-glove with British ground and air assets in a modern guerrilla war.

HeadHunter

5-73 CAV and Their Fight for Iraq's Diyala River Valley

By Peter C. Svoboda

The story of the 15-month deployment of 5/73 CAV to Iraq in 2006–07, in the soldiers' own words.

Selected in 2005 by the US Army to be the first airborne reconnaissance squadron, 5-73 CAV, was formed from 3rd Battalion, 505th Parachute Infantry Regiment. The members were hand-selected by the squadron command team. Headhunter is a unique account of the War on Terror. It's a soldier's story, told by those very paratroopers who fought to tame Diyala. Based on dozens of interviews conducted by the author, the narrative describes the danger of combat, the loss of comrades and the struggles of returning from a deployment.

Peter C. Svoboda is a writer and was previously a firefighter for 25 years. He volunteers as a museum docent at the National Museum of the United States Army. He was inspired by his dad's World War II service in the airborne forces along with a desire to tell the story of this current generation of paratroopers.

The Rise and Fall of Sweden as a Military Superpower 1611-1721

By Henrik O. Lunde

The meteoric rise of Sweden as the pre-eminent military power in Europe during the Thirty Years War.

This fascinating book describes how the Swedes first arrived in continental Europe during the 30 Years War, under their king Gustavus Adolfus. The Swedes proved more innovative in battle than their opponents, using the new arm of artillery plus tactical formations to establish supremacy on the battlefield. With the salvation of Protestantism the emergence of the Swedes as a power to be reckoned with meant new geopolitical complications for the existing powers of Europe. Successor Charles XII renewed Swedish aggression as he found that no army on the Continent could stand against his legions from the north.

Henrik O. Lunde, born in Norway, moved to America as a child and thence rose in the U.S. Army to become a Colonel in Special Forces. Highly decorated for bravery in Vietnam, he proceeded to gain advance degrees and assume strategic posts.

By Jay Stout with George L. Cooper

The story of George L. Cooper, who flew 74 missions in B-25 strafers over the Pacific, including detailed accounts of air combat.

Born in the Philippines to an American father and a Filipina mother, George Cooper is one of the few surviving veteran pilots who saw action over such fearsome targets as Rabaul and Wewak. In this book author Jay Stout, a former fighter pilot, brings to life the reality of life as a young pilot during the Pacific War, not only the air combat but also recruitment and training, the evolution of aircraft and tactics, and what it was really like conducting combat from jungle bases. Intertwined with George's story is that of his family, living in the Japanese-occupied Philippines. Jayhawk describes the war as it really was – a conflict with far-reaching tentacles that gripped and tore at not only the combatants, but also their families, friends and the way they lived their lives.

America's Good Terrorist

John Brown and the Harpers Ferry Raid

By Charles P. Poland Jr.

A biography of John Brown, examining his failed raid on Harpers Ferry, and the part his actions played in causing the Civil War.

Brown's use of violence was to strike terror in the heart of slave owners, terror that he hoped would intimidate them to free their slaves to ensure their families' safety. The modern view of Brown has unintentionally made him a 'good terrorist', a man who gave his life attempting to terminate the evil institution of human bondage. This new biography covers Brown's background and the context to his decision to carry out the raid, a detailed narrative of the raid and its consequences for both those involved and America; and an exploration of the changing characterisation of Brown since his death.

Phoenix Rising

From the Ashes of Desert One to the Rebirth of U.S. Special Operations

By Keith Nightingale

An arresting account of the birth of SOF through the prism of the Iran Hostage Rescue attempt.

In 1980, the U.S. Embassy in Tehran was seized and the American citizens there taken hostage. The Joint Chiefs of Staff examined its inventory of capabilities and concluded it had in reality, no capabilities other than nuclear weapons or mass conventional forces—neither of which were rational outcomes. Any capability tailored for this form of conflict would have to be built from scratch. Keith Nightingale, then a junior officer, was Deputy Operations Officer of Joint Task Force Eagle Claw, commanded by Major General James Vaught, which attempted to do just that. This is his personal, unique account of the events leading to the rescue attempt, and how its failure directly led to the creation of the Special Operations competency that the United States enjoys today.

Anatomists of Empire

Race, Evolution and the Discovery of Human Biology in the British World

By Ross L. Jones

A new vision of bio-ecology that links humans to their past and their evolutionary niche.

The 20th-century anatomists Grafton Elliot Smith, Frederic Wood Jones and Arthur Keith travelled the globe collecting, cataloguing and constructing morphologies of the biological world with the aim of weaving these into a new vision of bio-ecology that links humans to their deep past as well as their evolutionary niche. Their version of human development and history profoundly influenced public opinion as they wrote prolifically for the press, they published bestsellers on human origins and evolution, and they spoke eloquently at public meetings and on the radio. By changing popular views of race and environment, they moulded attitudes as to what it meant to be human in a post-Darwinian world – thus providing a potent critique of racism.

Four Weeks One Summer

When It All Went Wrong

By Nicholas Whitlam

Looks at this four-week tipping point in pre-WWII European history.

In the summer of 1936 it all went wrong – for democracy and for Spain, even for the British royals. Politicians failed, and Hitler was emboldened to plan a new European war, and more. When some army generals sought to overthrow Spain's elected government, Francisco Franco quickly emerged as their leader; Nazi Germany and Fascist Italy supported him with men and materiel; pusillanimous politicians in Britain and the United States, even in France, turned a blind-eye – and the Spanish Civil War was on. It was an incongruous, at times brilliant, juxtaposition of events.

The Myth of British Betrayal

By Augustine Meaher

Dismantles the myth of the British betrayal that exposed Australia to Japanese invasion in 1942.

Generations of Australians have been reared on the belief the fall of Singapore in February 1942 was a British betrayal that exposed Australia to Japanese invasion. In The Road to Singapore a young American historian, using archival records from across the globe, exposes the notion of a British betrayal as nothing more than a myth. British authorities never gave Australia an iron-clad guarantee against enemy attack and invasion and always stressed the need for Australians to take responsibility for home defence.

It is the stage of ritual, procession and protest and the site of proud architecture, fine trees and public utilities. And it also has its hazards, of traffic, animals, assault, falling buildings, fire.

French Canadian Rebels as Australian Convicts

By Brian M. Petrie

Tells the story of 58 French Canadians who were convicted of treason and transported to life at hard labour in New South Wales.

After the 1838 Lower Canada rebellion, 58 French Canadians were convicted of treason, sentenced to death, and later transported to life at hard labour in New South Wales. From the day they left Quebec, until the last man returned home in 1848 their activities were closely observed in journals, diaries and newspapers, and it seems they were viewed with wariness and fascination and treated with leniency. With a sympathetic handling of their petitions by the Governor, they only served two years before parole was granted and they were pardoned.

Forgotten Country

A Short History of Central Australia

By Alan Powell

Central Australia has been the last frontier of Australia, and politically the forgotten country. This is the story of European settlement and its culture clash with the original people.

This book distils the conclusions of Emeritus Professor Alan Powell, reached after more than four decades of exploring northern Australia and researching the history of white settlement and the culture clash with the original people, through war and peace, in the Northern Territory. Powell cuts through the immense array of Territory yarns and learned tomes that reflect what we know of the Centre and moves straight to the core factors of its history: the visionary explorers.

Eighteenth century British convicts were sent to Botany Bay on the recommendation of 'Tommy' Townshend, a John Bull figure, and politician largely in Opposition.

When the British Cabinet accepted his recommendation that convicts be sent to Botany Bay, Lord Sydney – Thomas Townshend – instructed the Treasury 'forthwith' to provide for the First Fleet. A John Bull figure, full of bumptious ambition and self-confidence, 'Tommy' Townshend spent most of his working life in parliamentary opposition. He sympathised with the American colonists while holding true to British interests, and was made a peer in 1783 for his key role in settling the peace between Americans and Britons.

If George Orwell Were Alive Today...

on Nineteen Eighty-four and the thrust of Orwellian political satire

By John Dale

More than any other 20th century writer, George Orwell responded to a period of historical change by imagining his dystopian '1984'.

Great writers engage with the changing times and by using their imaginations transform their ideas and environments into fiction. George Orwell responded to a period of historical change by imagining his dystopian future in perhaps the most influential political novel ever written. At the same time Nineteen Eighty-Four was very much a product of post-war England with its rations and shortages. Orwell, in fact, remained a socialist until his death in January 1950, but the far more intriguing question is what Nineteen Eighty-Four would be like if it were written today, in an age of Islamist terror, fake news and post-truth politics.

The Passage of the Damned

By Elsbeth Hardie

In 1797, Britain rashly pressed prisoners of war into the New South Wales Corps and armed them as guards on a ship carrying convicts to New South Wales. The true story of those on board is told in detail in this book for the first time.

In 1797 the British government pressed a small group of French and German prisoners of war into the New South Wales Corps, gave them firearms and placed them as guards on a ship carrying sixty-six convict women and two convict men to New South Wales. The result was a mutiny some months into the voyage in which the captain of the Lady Shore was killed and the fates of all of those on board were tied together when the ship was taken to South America.

South Sea Argonaut

James Colnett and the Enlargement of the Pacific 1772-1803

By Granville Allen Mawer

This book tells the story of James Colnett, an officer of the British Royal Navy, an explorer, and a maritime fur trader.

Colnett served under James Cook during Cook's second voyage of exploration and later became a pioneer in the Pacific sea otter trade, nearly starting a war with Spain in the process. He attempted to force Japan and Korea to admit British trade, and failing that smuggled pelts into China. He conducted a whaling reconnaissance to the Galapagos Islands and transported convicts to New South Wales. One way or another, James Colnett managed to intersperse fighting his country's enemies in the American and French wars with thirteen years plying the South Seas.

Matthew Flinders & George Bass

'A Passion for Exploring New Countries'

By Josephine Bastian

A compelling original account of Southern Seas adventuring and Imperial maritime history at its most extraordinary.

Matthew Flinders charted and named Australia. George Bass, naturalist and businessman, gave his name to the Strait that divides Tasmania from the mainland. They were ready for even greater ventures. And then it was all over. Bass had set out on a voyage he would never finish – his life ended when he was just 32. Flinders was thrust into prison as a spy and detained for nearly 7 years. This book is historically rigorous, yet its protagonists' fascinating and contrasting characters, the powerful background of the Napoleonic War, and the extraordinary events of their lives make it as gripping as any novel.

Soon after its foundation in 1901, the Commonwealth of Australia gave women the vote and the right to sit in parliament. Women's suffrage was a major aspect of the new nation's progressive and international thinking. With great vigour, Australian women, including the Melbourne-born artist Dora Meeson Coates, ably involved themselves with the women's movement in Great Britain. This book includes fascinating accounts of his time in the British Embassy in Moscow in the 1950s and of his later visits to the USSR, whose leadership labelled him a 'bourgeois falsifier', a title he wore with some pride. His story is also of a family and his inauspicious beginnings in a working-class district of Melbourne, his education in the 1930s and 1940s, war service in New Guinea and early interest in political thought. Australia's Experience of Shell Shock in the Great War

By Michael Tyquin

Revised edition looking at what happened to soldiers who suffered psychologically in the First World War.

Madness and the Military compellingly revisits this long-ignored aspect of Australian military history and suggests a link with so-called shell shock and moral injury. Hailed by experts as both compassionate and instrumental in opening a whole new field of Australian history, it tries to make sense of that forgotten generation of war veterans. It also effectively challenges a number of long-cherished myths surrounding both the commemoration of that war and the treatment of wartime psychological casualties.

An analysis of Prussian militarism as causes of WWI where the author purposefully seeks to expose the fallacy of seeing the past in terms that reflect some present-day agenda.

John Moses was trained at the Universities of Munich and Erlangen by professors committed to the Rankean tradition of showing 'how it actually was', as far as humanly possible, based on diligent archival research and with the strictest objectivity and emotional detachment. Moses and Overlack have been at pains to identify the essential peculiarity of the Kaiser's Germany and have focused sharply on the question of how its war planning impinged on Australasia.

The Landing, The Legend, The Law

By Catherine Bond

The word 'Anzac' has been the subject of a century of legal regulation in Australia and internationally. Catherine Bond interrogates the legal history of one of Australia and New Zealand's most revered words and the restrictions on the acronym that still exist today.

This book examines how, in 1916, control of 'Anzac' was introduced initially for businesses then extended, without precedent, to more private spheres, including prohibiting the use of the word as the name of a home. It documents the effect that these laws had on the Australian home front and the devastating impact on soldiers and families. Yet, such use and regulation was not limited to Australia, with New Zealand, United Kingdom and United States authorities.

Nazi Dreamtime

Australian Enthusiasts for Hitler's Germany

By David Bird

The story of the extreme-righted ultra-nationalism in Australia before and during the World War II, focussing on native-born Australians who were attracted to the ideology of Nazism.

The appeal of Nazism was marked in the immediate post-Depression years amongst those Australians who rejected democracy but were uncomfortable with alternatives on the conservative Right and on the Left. Their belief was that the achievements and tenets of the Nazi regime were applicable to Australian political and cultural life to some extent. The aggressive foreign policy followed by Berlin in the late thirties failed to shake the faith of these ideologues and even the duress of war would not dislodge the faith of some in Hitlerism.

Fighting Monsters

An Intimate History of the Sandakan Tragedy

By Richard Wallace Braithwaite

Only 6 escapees survived the Sandakan death marches in 1945. This is the story of one of them.

Only six escapees survived the Sandakan death marches of 1945 in North Borneo, the worst atrocity ever inflicted on Australian soldiers. 1787 Australian and 641 British POWs perished. An unusual and extreme POW story, the Sandakan tragedy had four stages: active resistance in 1942-3, stubborn endurance in 1943-4, the collapse of civilized existence in 1945 and, finally, the post-war decades of torment for the six damaged survivors, the gradual assimilation of the story, the healing of the damage and the commemoration of the tragedy by the families and communities involved.

Guy Gaunt

The Boy from Ballarat Who Talked America into the Great War

By Anthony Delano

A true WWI secret service tale – Guy Gaunt's infiltration of America's leadership changed the course of history.

Guy Gaunt built a career and notoriety by playing outside the rules. When the Great War began he was the British naval attaché in Washington, beached for recklessness at sea. Taking over a network of disaffected immigrants he thwarted all efforts by the powerful German-American establishment in the United States to stop America from supporting the Allies. The exposure of a sinister German underground showed President Woodrow Wilson that America could not remain neutral. The Foreign Office never forgave him for outclassing its fledgling Secret Service.

The Empire Strikes South

Japan's Air War Against Northern Australia 1942-45 (Second Edition)

By Tom Lewis

Between 1942 and 1945 the Japanese waged a relentless air war against the vast expanses of Northern Australia.

For more than two years in WW2 Japanese aircraft crossed the north coast of Australia and bombed relentlessly. Savage dogfights were fought between the legendary Zero fighter and Allied Kittyhawks and Spitfires. Big twin-engine Betty bombers rained down blast and fire upon airfields and towns. The Empire Strikes South describes all of the aircraft used and gives an insight into the world of fighter pilots and aircrew. With a full range of new colour graphics by renowned illustrator Michael Claringbould, this significant new research reveals a battle for Australia that has been previously unknown.

Operation I-Go

Yamamoto's Last Offensive: New Guinea and the Solomons April 1943

By Michael Claringbould

Operation I-Go was Admiral Yamamoto's last offensive, using a powerful assembly of aircraft that threatened to overwhelm Allied defences in four key South Pacific locations in April 1943.

In early 1943 Japanese forces in the South Pacific had suffered three key strategic setbacks at Guadalcanal, Kokoda and the Battle of the Bismarck Sea. However Japanese strength in the theatre was far from spent, and the commander of the IJN Combined Fleet Admiral Yamamoto sensed an opportunity. Operation I-Go would be the largest IJN air operation ever launched in the region and the results were surprising.

Pacific Adversaries, Volume Three

Imperial Japanese Navy vs The Allies: New Guinea & the Solomons

By Michael Claringbould

Conveys detailed stories of aerial warfare in the South Pacific, chosen because both Japanese and Allied records can be matched for an accurate accounting.

The JNAF first appeared in the South Pacific in December 1941 and was at the vanguard of offensive efforts during the course of 1942. Following the bloody Guadalcanal campaign, the JNAF fought a largely defensive war in New Guinea and the Solomons against increasingly powerful Allied forces. Perhaps surprisingly, right through to the end of 1943 the JNAF offered significant resistance to the Allies and never ceded air superiority in the vicinity of its key base of Rabaul.

Storming the Wheatfield

John Caldwell's Union Division in the Gettysburg Campaign

By James M. Smith, Chris Bagley and Phil Laino

This gripping narrative is an in-depth study of the valiant men of General John Caldwell's Union Division during the Gettysburg Campaign.

Caldwell's Division made a desperate stand against a tough and determined Confederate force in farmer George Rose's nearly 20-acre Wheatfield. Ready for harvest, the infamous Wheatfield would change hands nearly six times in the span of two hours of fighting, becoming a trampled, bloody, no-man's land for thousands of wounded soldiers. Smith examines the lives of the Union soldiers in the ranks—as well as leaders Cross, Kelly, Zook, Brooke, and Caldwell himself. James Smith's Storming the Wheatfield goes deep into the lives the soldiers, evoking a personal connection with the troops. He painstakingly contacted nearly one hundred descendants of Caldwell's soldiers, producing one of the most extensively researched narratives to date.

Modern USMC Air Power

Aircraft and Units of the 'Flying Leathernecks'

By Joe Copalman

The only book on current USMC aviation units and aircraft types, describing USMC's world-wide operations and areas of responsibility by an expert author.

As America's expeditionary force-in-readiness, the US Marine Corps operates an eclectic mix of fixed-wing, rotary-wing, tiltrotor and unmanned aircraft to support the marine rifleman on the ground. The first two decades of the 21st century have seen an almost complete transformation of the marine air wings, as Cold War-era legacy aircraft yield to digital-age replacements. In Harpia's first book dedicated to a North American air arm, Joe Copalman explains the significance of each aircraft transition in the Marine Corps over the previous 20 years - community by community - on the Marine Air-Ground Task Force and its ability to conduct amphibious and expeditionary warfare.

While some of these transitions, like that of the KC-130T to KC-130J and AH-1W to AH-1Z, have been incremental, evolutionary steps up, others like the tandem-rotor CH-46 Sea Knight to the tiltrotor MV-22 Osprey and the introduction of the F-35 Lightning II to replace all three of the Marine Corps' tactical jets have revolutionised the way the service fights. In addition to introducing newer, vastly more capable and connected aircraft into its air wings, the Marine Corps has also invested heavily in keeping its remaining legacy fleets at the cutting edge of lethality and survivability throughout the final days of each type's service.

Utilising a before-and-after approach, Copalman guides the reader through every transition in Modern USMC Air Power, examining what each legacy aircraft brought to the fight, and how the service's newer platforms have improved upon those capabilities, especially when aided by new constructs like precision-guided ordnance and digital interoperability.

The Armies of Spain and Portugal, 1660-1687

By Bruno Mugnai

The story, organisation, uniforms and equipment of the Spanish and Portuguese armies in the period 1660-1687.

It has been a commonly held historical belief that in the second half of the 17th century, the Spanish army suffered such catastrophic defeats that it effectively brought about the collapse of the state as a major player on the European stage. Spain's ability to fend off Louis XIV's assault was not eased by the fact that, at the same time, Spain had faced the Portuguese in the Iberian Peninsula, the English in the Caribbean, the Algerians in Melilla, as well as further insidious French assault in southern Italy and in the colonies.

By Frederic Chauvire

Analyses the upheavals which occurred in the charge of cavalry, from a tactical, socio-cultural and anthropological point of view.

This work focuses on the analysis of what constitutes the privileged combat action of heavy cavalry: the charge. This study is centred on France but is open to the whole of Europe, exploring the battlefields that dot this geographical area from the Wars of Religion to the War of the Spanish Succession. To embrace such a complex object of history, such an analysis must seek to cross tactical, socio-cultural and anthropological perspectives. It must take an interest in the institutional and technical environment, in the actors, but above all in the principles which found this singular warrior practice, in his doctrine of use.

Sieges in the Severn Valley during the English Civil War

By Richard Israel

Examines through historical and archaeological research the sieges of Bristol, Gloucester, Worcester, Bridgnorth and Shrewsbury.

The battlefields of Edgehill, Newbury and Marston Moor are superlatives with the middle of the 17th-century conflict known as the English Civil War, and whilst their importance to the conflict is undeniable, they detract from the power struggle that occurred between the Royalists and Parliamentarians in the towns and cities throughout the land. This power struggle culminated in the construction of siege batteries and fortifications. This book demonstrates how siege techniques and this style of warfare impacted on the outcome of the conflict that set brother against brother and father against son.

Carl Gustav Armfelt and the Struggle for Finland During the Great Northern War

By Eirik Hornborg and Eric Faithfull

A comprehensive account of the military career of one of the great and tragic figures from the final death throes of the Swedish empire.

This book draws on much primary source material to describe General Carl Gustav Armfelt's military career. He was already an experienced soldier at the outbreak of the war having spent 11 years in the army of Louis XIV. The book describes his role in opposing the relentless march of the Russian forces in rolling back the eastern frontier of the Swedish empire from his Ingrian homeland through Finland and into Sweden itself. It concludes with the ill-fated Trondheim campaign during the empire's final death throes and Armfelt's final years in Finland after the war.

Armies of the Italian States During the War of the Spanish Succession

By Ciro Paoletti

The second book ever made on this subject in the last century, and the first in English; both by the same author.

The War of Spanish Succession is well known in English concerning Flanders and Germany, not that much concerning Spain, not at all about Italy. The Italian front was so important that the French considered it as important as the German one, and committed there their best generals. It was considered so important in Vienna that the Emperor sent there his best general. Last, it was the front where all the French hopes to submit Europe died in Turin in 1706 after the first dramatic wound they suffered in Blenheim in 1704.

Guns, Gold and Slaves

The Ashanti Gunmen

By Paul Brinkley

Looks at Gold Coast history primarily from the African view.

Perhaps unsurprisingly in Europe the tide of books, save for academic materials, has never primarily focussed upon the voices of Africans. Such new literature as there is usually approaches the matter from Black New World modern perspectives, not objective assessments including contemporary Old World African perspectives. Old Africa was neither all victim nor all innocent. West Africa's history was complex. That was never truer than in the case of the Asante, the Land of Gilded Emperors and gun toting hordes who achieved greater victories against Britain, and for longer, than other African Kingdoms like the Zulus and the Afrikaners.

Eagles over the Alps

Suvorov in Italy and Switzerland, 1799

By Christopher Duffy

A superbly researched and detailed narrative of the Russian campaign in the Alps against the armies of Revolutionary France.

1799 – Russia's greatest soldier was at war in Italy and Switzerland. Led by Suvorov, believed by many to be the equal of Napoleon, the Russian and Austrian troops claimed one victory after another against the French. Much more than strategy and tactics, this a story of adventure as a Russian army fights desperate rearguard actions, and tries to escape through cruel mountain passes in the night. Suvorov's memory is still treasured in the Russian armed forces today. Suvorov's marches and battles can be traced on the many maps, photographs, and original artwork recreates the appearance of the troops.

The Battle of the Chesapeake 1781

The Royal Navy and the Battle that Lost America

By Quintin Barry

An account of the crucial battle of Chesapeake Bay in 1781, and the events leading up to it.

This book describes how, step by step, the crisis was reached. After France had accepted the need for a major effort to support the Americans, Count de Grasse arrived in the West Indies in April 1781 with a large fleet, intending to arrive off the North American coast in July. The battle that followed was indecisive, though the French had the best of it. Cornwallis was now besieged at Yorktown by Washington; a force intended to relieve him arrived too late and he surrendered at Yorktown. The war for American independence was decisively lost; all that remained was a bitter debate as to who was to blame.

The Sieges of the '45

Siege Warfare during the Jacobite Rebellion of 1745-1746

By Jonathan D. Oates

A study of the sieges of eight fortresses in Scotland and England during the Jacobite rebellion of 1745-1746.

There were more sieges than there were battles during the Jacobite campaign in Scotland and England in 1745-1746, yet no one work has concentrated on these episodes. Siege warfare was more common than set piece battles in Europe at this time and the '45 was no exception. This book examines the eight places which were under siege, examining the history and strength of the fortress or walled town, its garrison and the strength of the attackers, along with the artillery employed by both sides. It narrates each siege, using manuscript and published contemporary sources in order to do so.

By Hughes de Bazouges and Alistair Nichols

The story of the Légion de Damas from its roots in the upheavals of Revolutionary France to disbanding in Ukraine in 1798, through Dutch, British and Russian service as well as alongside the Austrians.

This is a comprehensive and detailed history of the Légion de Damas which provides a case study of the French military emigration and thus an alternative view point of the Revolution that caused it and the wars that followed. By drawing in particular on memoirs of members of the unit and contemporary material in archives across Europe, from Britain to Russia, the story is told of those who remained steadfast to God and their King.

At the Point of the Bayonet

The Peninsular War Battles of Arroyomolinos and Almaraz 1811-1812

By Robert Griffith

Arroyomolinos and Almaraz showed that Rowland Hill was a general of considerable skill and daring. This is the first detailed study of two small but important actions of the Peninsular War.

Rowland Hill was one of the Duke of Wellington's most trusted subordinates, known for caring deeply for the welfare of his men. The author gives a greater focus on the individual regiments and the men who served in them than is often the case with larger battles. He uses memoirs, previously unpublished letters, and official returns and reports to paint a very detailed picture of two small but important battles of the Peninsular War and the men that fought them.

The Maratha and Jat Campaigns, 1803-1806 and the Emergence of an Indian Army

By Joshua Proven

Survey of the main theatres of the 2nd Anglo Maratha War, including campaigns against Holkar and the Jats after the capture of Delhi.

Although successful, the conclusion of the war was much less glorious than the biographies of the Duke of Wellington care to admit. Few conflicts from this time convey in such detail the challenges faced by field commanders conducting operations in India and fewer books continue the story of the Second Maratha War to its ultimate conclusion in the Punjab where the last Maratha prince surrendered, this after the British 'siege lords' under General Lake had been humbled before the mighty mud walls of the impregnable fortress of Bharatpur.

The Sea Is My Element

The Eventful life of Admiral Sir Pulteney Malcolm, 1766-1838

By Paul Martinovich

The Life of a naval officer seen through his personal letters, and exploring the naval and social history of the late Georgian era.

This biography is based in large part on Malcolm's personal letters to members of his family, particularly to his wife Clementina. The several hundred letters reveal a man who was at once a humane commander, a brilliant seaman, a convivial friend, and a loving husband. While the book offers a portrait of a man devoted to his service, the letters range over far more than naval activity, illuminating an eventful life in a turbulent age. Thus Malcolm's story demonstrates not only the growing professionalism of the Royal Navy, but also the social and economic pressures changing British society.

A Study in Leadership

Field Marshal Cavan – The Reluctant Chief, 1865-1946

By Simon Doughty

Examines the life of a regimental soldier who lacked personal ambition and yet became the professional head of the Army 100 years ago.

Rudolph Lambart, 10th Earl of Cavan was a leader who believed in order, discipline, and the importance of communicating clearly; the perfect Guardsman. He was well-read, learnt languages wherever he went, was charming and showed style, as demonstrated by the occasion when his 'cigar saved the situation' in November 1914. He served throughout the war, becoming a Field Marshal. Then, at the beginning of another war, at the age of 75, he was taking up his spade to dig trenches to defend the approaches to Ayot St Lawrence from the invader.

The Tritton Chaser

The Medium Mark A Whippet Tank in Action on the Western Front 1918

By R.M. Langham

Looks in detail at the conception, prototype construction, manufacturing process and operational service history of the Medium Mark A 'Whippet' Tank in great detail for the first time.

The idea for a smaller, faster, more manoeuvrable type of tank was thought up by Sir William Tritton as early as September 1916. Emerging as a prototype in 1917, 200 of the tanks were initially ordered and the Army had high hopes for this fast tank, to act as a form of armoured cavalry, soon nicknamed the 'Whippet'. Many original documents combined with Tank Corps histories have been examined and used to compile a narrative charting the development of this pioneering early tank design and its operational service on the Western Front.

Air Battles over Hungary 1944-45

By Dmitriy Khazanov

Story of the air battles over Hungary that took place from October 1944 to March 1945 between the Red Army Air Force and the Luftwaffe.

This work is dedicated for the most part to the fighting over Hungary during the course of the Debrecen (6 October – 27 October 1944) and Budapest (29 October 1944 – 13 February 1945) offensives, as well as the Balaton Defensive Operation (6 – 15 March 1945), which the Red Army carried out from autumn 1944 until the spring of 1945. The conduct of these operations preceded an attempt by the Regent of Budapest, Miklos Horthy, to pull his country out of the war. This attempt however was unsuccessful – Vice Admiral Horthy was replaced under Hitler's orders by the pro-Hitlerite henchman Szalasi, after which fierce and desperate battles broke out both on the ground and in the air.

By Evan McGilvray

A political and historic study of the recent failure of the expansion of democracy across the world and the arrogance of the ruling classes and capitalist classes as they tried to use democracy as a tyranny.

This book is a re-examination of work carried out in 1999 as Poland, Hungary and the Czech Republic were about to become members of NATO. By looking at the international situation within and without Europe, the author had points to how the West, principally the USA and the UK, tried to enforce democracy on an unwilling world and largely wrecked the ideals of that system through a lack of understanding while acting with complete disregard for those who they see as being slightly less than them and treating people with contempt and with little pity.

Turret versus Broadside

The Divisive Evolution of British Naval Power, 1860-1870

By Howard J. Fuller

A sweeping, in-depth examination of the legendary naval controversy which shook the Victorian Royal Navy and climaxed in the foundering of HMS Captain in 1870.

On the 150th anniversary of the capsizing of Britain's low-freeboard yet fully-masted ironclad, HMS Captain, this widely-researched, intensive analysis of the great 'Turret vs. Broadside' debate sheds new light on how the most well-funded and professional navy in the world at the height of its power could nevertheless build an 'inherently unstable' capital ship. Utilising an impressive array of government reports, contemporary periodicals, and unpublished personal papers this definitive study crucially provides for the first time both a long-term and international context.

Public schoolboys in the Great War were part of a nation in arms. This book explains how their involvement was far more than romantic idealism.

The book will examine the professionalisation of the British Army in the years leading up to 1914 and how the its relationship with the public schools developed. The rapid expansion of the Army after the outbreak of the war meant that a range of skills were needed to enable it to operate effectively. Operation Attleboro and Battles North of Saigon, 1966

By Arrigo Velicogna

A detailed and richly illustrated, blow-by-blow account of the first major showdown between the US Army, the Viet Cong and the North Vietnamese Army during the Vietnam War.

Attleboro was the largest American operation in the Vietnam War, the culmination of one year of bloody battles between the 9th Division and II Field Force Vietnam. It would be a test of different tactical approaches to be used in Vietnam: an 'infantry-heavy' approach favoured by the commander of the 196th, General De Saussure, and for firepower-intensive approach championed by the Commanding General of the 1st Infantry Division, General DePuy.

Run Through the Jungle

Military Assistance Command, Vietnam: Studies and Observations Group (MACV-SOG), 1964-1972, Volume 1

By Shawn Fisher

Operational history of the highly classified, joint-service special operations command of the United States during the Vietnam War.

The Military Assistance Command, Vietnam – Studies and Observations Group (MACV-SOG) – ran covert and unconventional warfare operations during the Second Indochina War, in the period 1964-1972. Answering only to the Joint Chiefs and the White House, the men of SOG wreaked havoc on the North Vietnamese from the Ho Chi Minh Trail in Laos to the North Vietnamese coastline beyond the 17th parallel. SOG scouted enemy supply lines, tapped communication lines, raided POW camps, spread propaganda and fear with psychological operations.

Life After Nuclear War

Britain's Secret Plans to Survive World War Three, Volume 1: 1950-1970

By Mark Rowe

A blood-chilling, detailed reconstruction of official planning by the British authorities in the event of a nuclear war in Great Britain.

This story reveals details of what officials thought would happen, and what the days, weeks, months and the years 'after' would look like after an atomic bomb and how the Civil Defence Corps was planning for the 'unthinkable'. At local, regional, and national level, exercises to test preparedness for nuclear war required planners to imagine how war would come, and what bombing would look like. Exercises affected not only the obvious departments of government – police and fire services, and hospitals – but everyone; the railways, mines, retail and agriculture.

Dropping the Big Ones

Live Testing of Soviet Nuclear Bombs, 1949-1962

By Krzysztof Dabrowski

The first detailed reconstruction of live-testing of nuclear weapons by crews of the Soviet Bomber Aviation in English.

Between 1949 and 1962, the Soviets set off 214 nuclear bombs in the open air. Equipped with the full range of bombers – from the Tupolev Tu-4, Tupolev Tu-16, to the gigantic Tu-95 – the units in question were staffed by men colloquially known as the 'deaf-and-dumb': people sworn to utmost secrecy, living and serving in isolation from the rest of the world. This book, richly illustrated with authentic photographs and custom-drawn colour profiles, is the story of the aircrews involved and their aircraft, all of which were carefully hidden not only by the Iron Curtain, but by a thick veil of secrecy for more than half a century.

By Mariano Sciaroni and with Andy Smith

An exclusive and thrilling story of the crews involved on both sides of the Falklands/Malvinas War, their intensive and advanced training, and their dramatic combat experiences.

When the Task Force of the Royal Navy started its southbound voyage, as the second major act during the Falklands/Malvinas War of 1982, its commanders assessed the Argentine submarines as the biggest threat. Even if limited in total size and scope, this threat was so conditioning that the conclusion was that it had to be neutralised at the earliest possible moment in time, otherwise no victory would have been possible.

The War in Northern Oman

Muscat and the Sultanate of Oman, 1954-1962

By Peter Shergold

Covers one of the least-well-known conflicts in the Middle East, fought in Oman during the second half of the 1950s.

This book provides a detailed account of the political dynamics which led to the eruption of violence, but foremost examines the use of force, the wider conventional military campaign, operations by special forces, military capacity building, and the application of soft power factors for civilian capacity building. Moreover, it emphasises the process of reconciliation and international engagement. Based on extensive research in official documentation, and including personal testimonies, and veterans' photos, it provides exclusive coverage of one of few wars in which a grassroots insurgency suffered a clear-cut military defeat.

The First Quarter of a Century, 1948-1973

It stands apart from many other books in performing this examination in a more dispassionate and critical manner, without the common hyperbole. ## Island of the Setting Sun

REVISED EDITION

In Search of Ireland's Ancient Astronomers

By Anthony Murphy and Richard Moore

This book explores the invasion myths of Ireland, the link between the ancient astronomers and St Patrick, and the true inspiration behind Newgrange's white quartz facade.

Ireland is home to some of the world's oldest astronomically aligned structures, giant stone monuments erected over 5,000 years ago. Despite their apparent simplicity, these megalithic edifices were crafted by a scientifically knowledgeable community of farmers who endeavoured to enshrine their beliefs in a stellar afterlife within the very fabric of their cleverly designed stone temples.

Finally back in print, this reissued edition shows that the builders of monuments such as Newgrange were adept astronomers, cunning engineers and capable surveyors. Their huge monuments are memorials in stone and earth, enshrining a belief system which resulted from a crossover between science and spirituality.

Post-Pandemic

12 Lessons in Crisis Management

By Jonathan McMahon

Not just a personal account of a crisis past, but also an essential guide for dealing with the crisis present.

In little more than a decade the world has faced two catastrophes that few foresaw and fewer still had plans to address. As populations went into lockdown to slow the spread of COVID-19 and economic activity collapsed, many countries had barely recovered from the previous global financial crisis.

As a key insider to the Irish bank bailout post-2008, Jonathan McMahon was at the heart of the response, witnessing what it takes to manage a crisis that threatens a nation. Battle-hardened by his experiences at the top of UK financial regulation during the terrorist attacks of September 11, 2001, Jonathan's advice on how to deal with crises is invaluable as governments grapple with the effects of COVID-19.

Sherman Firefly

Armor PhotoHistory

By Peter Brown

This book covers the development and use of the Sherman Firefly with 148 period b/w photos, original documents, 1/35th scale plans and colour plates.

By the final stages of W.W. II the American Sherman had become the mainstay of British and Commonwealth armies. However German tanks had increased their armour thickness which means its original 75 mm gun was no longer adequate. To counter this the 17-pdr anti-tank gun was fitted to many tanks, providing them with enough firepower to defeat the Tigers and Panthers. This book covers the Firefly's development, production and service in British, Canadian, New Zealand, South African, Czechoslovak and Polish armies.

Cold War Resistance

The International Struggle Over Antibiotics

By Marc Landas

Uncovers the dark history behind the discovery, production, and distribution of antibiotics, and how the Cold War played a role in today's worsening resistance to antibiotics.

In 1949 America embargoed any material deemed of "strategic importance" - including antibiotics - from going to Communist countries. This inadvertently created a system of Soviet satellite antibiotic factories among Warsaw Pact countries that produced sub-par antibiotics, which fostered an environment conducive to antibiotic resistance.

Rage

Narcissism, Patriarchy, and the Culture of Terrorism

By Abigail R. Esman

A groundbreaking book about the links between domestic violence, terrorism, mass shootings, national security, and the narcissistic personality.

Esman has studied the connections between domestic abuse and terrorism and the forces that inspire both forms of violence. In this book the author brings into focus the complex web that ties them together terrorism and violence, illuminating the terrorist psyche and the cultures that create it. Esman presents clear explanations of pathological narcissism and its roots in shame-honour cultures – both familial and socio-political – through portraits of terrorists and batterers. The book sheds new light on the roots of violence and terrorism while advancing proactive measures to protect values and traditions of justice, equality, and freedom.

Who Invented Oscar Wilde?

The Photograph at the Center of Modern American Copyright

By David Newhoff

A perspective for understanding the development and purpose of creators' rights in the United States.

In 1883, an article in the New York Times featured the headline, "Did Sarony Invent Oscar Wilde?" It was a sarcastic reference to the infringement of Napoleon Sarony's photograph, Oscar Wilde No. 18. The actual infringer, argued that no photograph should ever be protected by copyright because there is no "author" who is "writing" the finished work. Beginning with a lighthearted overview of copyright history, from the first copyright case in 6th-century Ireland to the establishment of copyright in the US, David Newhoff orients the reader toward a basic understanding of pretechnological copyright law.

Global Spread of Islamism and the Consequences for Terrorism

By Michael Freeman and with Katherine Ellena and Amina Kator-Mubarez

Examines the causes of terrorism, and how potential causal factors have changed over time by looking at several key events of 1979.

Examines how key events created incentives for different actors to spread the supply of Islamism, the institutions that they created in various countries, and the terrorists coming out of these institutions. 1979 marked the emergence of revolutionary Islam as a global political force. By also tracing the conflict in Syria, terrorism and sectarianism in Iraq, the war in Yemen, the nuclear and missile programs, the security apparatus in Iran, and fundamentalist operations around the world, Michael Freeman looks at the broader, and more accepted (and not necessarily violent) ideology from which many Islamic terrorists eventually arise.

The World War II Battle and the Search for a Lost U.S. Battalion

By Joseph M. Pereira and John L. Wilson

The reconstruction of a little-known battle during World War II, and the impact it has to this day.

Among the most exhaustive – and frustrating – searches for missing soldiers has been an effort by the U.S. Army to find a group of GIs who died in a small battle fought in November 1944 near the German-Belgium border. After nearly 10 searches spanning decades, results are discouraging. Families are still missing husbands, brothers, uncles. As the Army continues to look for the men who gave their lives in that engagement, the book identifies the places where they were last seen on the battlefield.

The Remarkable Story of the Irish During the Texas Revolution

By Phillip Thomas Tucker

Sets forth one of the best remaining untold stories of the Alamo and Texas Revolution by exploring a largely forgotten and long ignored history: the dramatic saga of the Irish in Texas.

The important contributions of the Irish in winning the struggle against Mexico and establishing a new republic are noticeably absent from the Alamo and Texas Revolutionary historiography. Phillip Thomas Tucker breaks new ground by rectifying the oversight in this book, now available in paperback. The author utilises primary sources, including rare newspaper articles, journals, and diaries, together with quality secondary accounts, to paint the dramatic saga of the Irish in Texas.

First Fallen

The Life of Colonel Elmer Ellsworth, the North's First Civil War Hero

By Meg Groeling

Examines every facet of Ellsworth's complex, fascinating life and is the story of many young men who fought and died for the Union.

Colonel Elmer Ellsworth was the first Union officer killed in the American Civil War. When it happened, the entire North was aghast. Ellsworth was a celebrity and had just finished traveling with his famed U. S. Zouave Cadets drill team. Was it youthful enthusiasm or a lack of formal training that resulted in his death? There is evidence on both sides. Groeling's well-written biography is grounded in years of examining archival resources, diaries, personal letters, newspapers, and other accounts. In the sixty intervening years since the last portrait of Ellsworth was written, new information has arisen.

Reconsidering George B. McClellan's Generalship in the Maryland Campaign from South Mountain to Antietam

By Steven R. Stotelmyer

Combines extensive primary research and a keen appreciation for the infrastructure and capabilities of the terrain to look at George B. McClellan's generalship during the Maryland Campaign.

The importance of Robert E. Lee's first movement north of the Potomac River in September 1862 is difficult to overstate. After his string of successes in Virginia, a decisive Confederate victory in Maryland or Pennsylvania may well have spun the war in an entirely different direction. Why he and his Virginia army did not find success across the Potomac was due in large measure to the generalship of George B. McClellan, as Steven Stotelmyer ably demonstrates in this book.

An absorbing and eminently entertaining collection of inspirational stories of life and death, hope and resilience, and unimagined strength.

Being aboard a sinking ship is perhaps the most terrifying experience anyone can endure. Imagine those last peaceful moments as the vessel beneath you slides quickly into the dark waters. Among the tales in this terrifying yet absorbing collection are the recollections of sailors from the USS Indianapolis who floated hopelessly as their companions were torn apart by sharks; of the crew whaleship Essex, who did the unthinkable; of small boat adventurers like Dougal Robertson, who survived for weeks on little but faith.

Soldiers of Barbarossa

Combat on the Eastern Front

By David Stahel, Craig Luther and California, Bakersfield

Drawing from thousands of soldiers' accounts, letters, and diaries, the authors tell the story of Barbarossa and the men at war.

In June 1941, the jaws of the German war machine clamped onto the Soviet Union, with German soldiers – the Third Reich's teeth – slicing through the Red Army, encircling and killing and capturing. Before the end of the year, the Red Army halted the German blitzkrieg and saved the Soviet Union. It was a defining moment of World War II and a defining moment of military history – a defining moment of what it meant to go to war in the twentieth century, with an army designed to devastate.

Churchill, Roosevelt and Company

Studies in Character and Statecraft

By Lewis Lehrman

Scrupulous in its research and fair in its judgments, Lehrman's book reveals the personal diplomacy, the character and statecraft, at the core of the leadership of the Anglo-American alliance.

The ultimate victory of the WWII alliance has obscured many of the conflicts behind Franklin Roosevelt's charm and Winston Churchill's victory signs – the clashes of principles and especially personalities between and within the leadership of the two nations. Synthesising an impressive variety of sources from memoirs and letters to histories and biographies, the author explains how the Anglo-American alliance worked – and occasionally did not work – by presenting portraits and case studies of the men who worked the back channels and back rooms, the generals and the admirals, the secretaries and under-secretaries, ambassadors and ministers, responsible for carrying out Roosevelt's and Churchill's agendas while also pursuing their own.

Operation Tidal Wave

The Bloodiest Air Battle in the History of War

By Vincent Lupiano

Tells the story of the bloodiest air battle in the history of war, when 1,700 American airmen set out to bomb the oil refineries surrounding the city of Ploesti, Romania.

August 1, 1943. Success, they thought, would be a force in ending the war. Success instead was extremely limited, and 500 airmen were killed, wounded, captured, or interned. Negligible damage resulted at the Ploesti refineries, and a few months later they were operating at one-hundred percent capacity. To show the asperity of the raid, five Congressional Medals of Honor were awarded, two posthumously.

Generals during World War II usually stayed to the rear, but not Matthew Ridgway and Maxwell Taylor. During D-Day and the Normandy campaign, these commanders of the 82nd "All-American" and the 101st "Screaming Eagle" Airborne Divisions refused to remain behind the lines and stood shoulder-to-shoulder with their paratroopers in the thick of combat.

The Dangerous Missions of a U.S. Navy Bomber Squadron in World War II

By Ed Kittrell

The story of the Blue Raiders whose unique long-range missions entailed bombers venturing a thousand miles out over the Pacific, alone.

The story of the World War II bomber squadrons who flew a different kind of mission. VPB-117 – the Blue Raiders – were unique not only because its B-24 Liberators flew for the U.S. Navy and not the Army, but also because most of the Raiders' missions entailed bombers venturing out over the Pacific, alone, to seek and destroy on long-range missions of a thousand miles out and a thousand back, often at altitudes close enough for sea spray to cloud their windows. ## The Jagged Edge of Duty

A Fighter Pilot's World War II

By Robert Richardson

The intimate account of one pilot at war, but also the anatomy of the fighter-pilot experience in World War II.

On the very first day of the invasion of Sicily, three months into his combat career, Allan Knepper flew his P-38 Lightning fighter in a squadron sent out to sweep the island and interdict German ground targets. Retreating German infantry unexpectedly pounded the American flyers. Knepper was one of two shot down; he was never found. Knepper's story is the story-in-microcosm of thousands of American fighter pilots in World War II. Richardson recounts Knepper's experiences from training through combat and uses them to discuss the aircraft, tactics and doctrine, training, base life, and aerial combat of the war.

Atomic Bomb Island

How the Atomic Bombs Were Dropped on Japan in World War II

By Don Farrell

A thoroughly researched, illustrated mosaic of the final phase of the Manhattan Project, from the Battle of Tinian and the USS Indianapolis to Hiroshima and Nagasaki.

In time for the 75th anniversary, this book tells the story of an elite, top-secret team of soldiers, sailors, Marines, airmen, scientists, and engineers who came to Tinian in the Marianas in 1945 to prepare the island for delivery of the atomic bombs, to finalise the designs of the bombs themselves, and to launch the missions that would unleash hell on Japan. The U.S. turned virtually all of Tinian into a giant airbase, where the bombs could be assembled, B-29s could be launched, and the Manhattan Project scientists could do their last work.

The story of Dixie Kiefer, the victim of ten wounds in two wars, a veteran of some of the U.S. Navy's most celebrated carriers and battles, and a naval aviation pioneer.

After anti-submarine duty in World War I, Kiefer became a pioneer of naval aviation. His first WWII assignment was executive officer of the carrier Yorktown. He earned the Distinguished Service Medal at the Coral Sea and the Navy Cross at Midway, where – as his ship was sinking – he suffered severe burns to his hands and a compound fracture of his foot. 1943

Days of Peril, Year of Victory

By Victor Brooks

Argues that the year 1943 marked a significant shift in the World War II balance of power from the Axis to Allied forces.

Military historian Victor Brooks presents a global narrative of the American experience of war during the year, ranging from the tiny blood-drenched island of Tarawa to the vast expanses of North Africa. At no other period was the course of the war in such precarious balance, the author argues, as both Axis and Allies possessed roughly equivalent power, and as both sides still had reasonable expectations that victory could be achieved.

Nazi Prisoners of War in America

By Arnold Krammer

Tells the full story of how the U.S. government, between 1942 and 1945, detained nearly half a million Nazi prisoners of war in 511 camps across the country.

With a new introduction and illustrated with more than 70 rare photos, Krammer describes how, with no precedents upon which to form policy, America's handling of these foreign prisoners led to the hasty conversion of CCC camps, high school gyms, local fairgrounds, and race tracks to serve as holding areas. The Seattle Times calls Nazi Prisoners of War in America "the definitive history of one of the least known segments of America's involvement in World War II. Fascinating. A notable addition to the history of that war."

This reassessment of Hitler's strategic aims argues that Hitler intended to attack America once he had achieved his ambitions in Europe. Detailed here for the first time are the Third Reich's plans for worldwide deployment of secret weapons emerging from wartime research. The author also recounts other Axis schemes to attack American cities through the use of multistage missiles, submarine-launched rockets, and suicide missions against ships in the New York harbour. ## Greatest Escape

A True American Civil War Adventure

By Douglas Miller

The largest prison break in US history, when Yankee officers attempted a mass break-out from a Civil War prison considered escape-proof.

The majority of the men, obsessed with freedom, mapped out an elaborate escape plan and on one moonless night, 109 men dug their way to freedom. Freezing, starving, clad in rags, they still had to travel 40 miles to the Yankee lines and freedom. They were pursued by the whites in the area, but every black person they encountered was their friend. On many occasions, slaves risked their lives to help these Union men, and their journey was aided by a female-led Union spy network. The book uses the actual words of the prisoners uttered more than 150 years ago, as found in their diaries and journals.

A compilation of twelve stories regarding important moments in New York State's history during the American Revolution.

Spies! Loyalists! Tories! Conspiracy! Strange messages? Codes in invisible ink? The American Revolution was first and foremost a civil war that tore at the very fabric of families as well as society. Patriots were determined to separate from England; while Loyalists were just as determined to defeat what they saw as a rebellion. Many do not know that during several critical periods the war was almost fatally undermined by English sympathizers or in some cases opportunistic Patriots.

The Notorious Life of Ned Buntline

By Julia Bricklin

Captures the likeness of a man who sparked an American legend but whose own scandalous life somehow escaped history's limelight.

Edward Zane Carroll Judson aka Ned Buntline (1821-1886) was responsible for creating a highly romantic and often misleading image of the American West, albeit one that the masses found irresistible in the mid-to-late nineteenth century. He is best known for discovering William Frederick Cody (Buffalo Bill) and making the irrepressible scout a star. The Notorious Life of Ned Buntline captures a man whose readers often forgave his Jekyll-and-Hyde behaviour because of his inventive portrayal of a country trying to subdue the last of its natural landscapes and make sense of its teeming cities.

By Gary Bloomfield

The grand tour of the mid-West and Western states which would influence Roosevelt's second term and the shaping of the American west.

Dubbed the "Great Loop Tour," being careful not to call it a campaign tour, Roosevelt intended to seek re-election the following year. He was adamant that his speeches be devoid of any partisan rhetoric, nor would he meet solely with Republican office holders in the various cities and towns he planned to visit. Speeches, which he wrote himself, covered subjects of good citizenship, a square deal for every man, a strong navy, the positive aspects of the recent irrigation bill he signed into law, and conservation of the land, forests, rivers, and wildlife.

Death in the Highlands

The Siege of Special Forces Camp Plei Me

By J. Saliba

Based on archival research and interviews with veterans, it covers the battle for Plei Me in close, vivid, and human detail.

In the fall of 1965, the North Vietnamese Army launched its first major campaign against American forces, targeting, with 4,000 men, the U.S. Special Forces camp at Plei Me in the Central Highlands, where about a dozen green berets were training a few hundred South Vietnamese troops. In response, the U.S. choppered in a relief force of elite soldiers from Project Delta under legendary Chargin' Charlie Beckwith and dropped an unprecedented million pounds of munitions just yards from the camp's perimeter. The camp held out, but operations in the area continued. Within weeks, the Battle of Ia Drang broke out.

Dr. Mary Walker's Civil War

One Woman's Journey to the Medal of Honor and the Fight for Women's Rights

By Theresa Kaminski

The Civil War through the eyes of a woman confident she could make a contribution equal to that of any man.

Dr. Mary Edwards Walker was the only American woman ever to receive the Medal of Honor, awarded by President Andrew Johnson in 1865 in recognition of her incomparable medical service during the Civil War. Mary Walker's relentless pursuit of gender and racial equality is key to understanding her commitment to a Union victory in the Civil War. Her role in the women's suffrage movement became controversial and the US Army stripped Walker of her medal, only to have the medal reinstated in 1977.

Lectures of the Air Corps Tactical School and American Strategic Bombing in World War II

Edited by Phil Haun

Brings together nine ACTS lecture transcripts, which have been preserved in Air Force archives, exactly as delivered to the airmen destined to lead the US Army Air Forces in World War II.

Presented in this book is a distinctive American strategy of high-altitude daylight precision bombing as told through lectures given at the ACTS during the interwar period and how these airmen put the theory to the test. The book examines the Air Corps theory of HADPB as compared to the reality of combat in World War II by relying on recent, revisionist histories that have given scholars a deeper understanding of the impact of strategic bombing on Germany.

A History of Multinational Air Operations

Edited by Steven Paget and contributions from Bert Frandsen, Matthew Powell, Andrew Conway and John Moremon

Experts from around the world survey multinational military air operations from the birth of aviation to the present day.

In the past century, multinational military operations have become the norm; but while contributions from different nations provide many benefits – from expanded capability to political credibility – they also present a number of challenges. While joint military action has become commonplace, there have been few detailed studies of air power cooperation over a prolonged period or across multiple conflicts.

Thoughts on War

By Phillip S. Meilinger

Provocative collection of new and expanded essays offering a fresh, if controversial, perspective on time-honoured military values, one which encourages a critical revision of US military strategy.

War is changing. The twenty-first-century's new geopolitical situation demands new principles for warfare – de-emphasising decisive land victory in favour of airpower, intelligence systems, and indigenous ground forces. In this book Phillip S. Meilinger confronts the shortcomings of US military dogma in search of a new strategic doctrine. Jettisoning traditional perspectives and their focus on decisive battles, the author revisits historical campaigns looking for answers to more persistent challenges – how to coordinate forces, manipulate time, and fight on two fronts.

Ensuring Rapid and Effective Transition from Peace to War

By Meir Finkel

Using the Israel Defense Forces (IDF) as a case study, the author explores four important but generally neglected challenges of a swift transition from peace to wartime operations.

The need to quickly enter into conflict and succeed in the initial engagements is an enduring demand on militaries around the world. Given today's dynamic geopolitical environment, the concept of successful, rapid transition or organisational and mental readiness is more relevant than ever. With clear applications for the IDF and US armed services, Finkel's study offers specific examples of hard-to-accomplish rapid transitions as well as broad suggestions for how to improve readiness.

Parleying with the Devil

Prisoner Exchange in Yugoslavia, 1941–1945

By Gaj Trifkovic and foreword by Klaus Schmider

First comprehensive analysis of prisoner exchanges and the attendant contacts between the German occupation authorities and the Yugoslav Partisans.

The Second World War in Yugoslavia is notorious for the brutal struggle between the armed forces of the Third Reich and the communist-led Partisans. In this book Trifkovic argues that prisoner exchange had a decisive influence on prisoner of war policies on both sides and helped reduce the levels of violence for which this theatre of war became infamous. This book reveals that these points of contact, contrary to some claims, did not lead to collusion between these two parties against other Yugoslav factions or the Western Allies.

This book investigates topics such as the use of football as a tool of nation-state-based diplomacy, as a non-state actor, and the relationship between football and diplomatic actors in subnational, national, and transnational contexts. It examines the sport as a conduit for representation, communication, and negotiation. ## The Turkish Arms Embargo

Drugs, Ethnic Lobbies, and US Domestic Politics

By James F. Goode

Offers a revolutionary analysis of the complex factors leading to the imposition and continuance of the Turkish Arms Embargo.

In this book, James F. Goode demonstrates that, alone, the human rights issues surrounding the invasion fail to explain the resulting US-Turkish estrangement. Instead, he contends, factors including deep-seated 'Turkophobia', growing concern about a deadly heroin epidemic in the United States, and pro-Greek lobbies played important roles in heightening tensions and extending the embargo. Goode draws on newly available archival materials as well as the personal papers of key senators and congressmen to present the most complete analysis of the affair to date.

Fourteen Points for the Twenty-First Century

A Renewed Appeal for Cooperative Internationalism

Edited by Richard H. Immerman and Jeffrey A. Engel

A diverse group of thinkers – scholars, policymakers, entrepreneurs, poets, doctors, and scientists – explore new directions for the 21st century.

When the United States entered World War I, President Woodrow Wilson declared to Congress that the objective was not merely to bring “a new balance of power,” but rather to bring a “just and secure peace” to the world. This book takes up Wilson’s call for a new world order by proposing solutions to modern challenges such as migration, global warming, health care, and privacy in the digital age. These points challenge US leaders and policymakers to lead an international effort and work cooperatively with other nations with mutual respect.

America's Israel

The US Congress and American-Israeli Relations, 1967–1975

By Kenneth Kolander

Provides a vital new perspective on the US-Israel bond by focusing on Congress’s role in developing and maintaining the special relationship during a crucial period.

Previous studies have focused on the executive branch, but Kolander demonstrates that US-Israel relations did not follow a course preferred by successive presidential administrations, especially in the 1960s and 1970s. Instead, he illuminates how influential lobbies, America’s affinity for Israel and antipathy towards Arabs, and economic pressures influenced legislators and inspired congressional action in support of Israel.

Employs an impressive array of newspapers, unpublished memoirs, oral histories, and official military records to offer a ground-up look at that day.

Franklin D. Roosevelt said the attack on Pearl Harbour would “live in infamy” and its aftermath in the Bluegrass State. In this book the author uses a series of vignettes to uncover the untold, forgotten, or little-known stories of ordinary people – military and civilian – on the most extraordinary day of their lives. By L. Scott Lingamfelter

A veteran and former redleg of the First Infantry Division Artillery recounts the logistical and strategic decisions that led to a coalition victory.

Battles and Campaigns

John J. Pershing and Counterinsurgency Warfare in the Muslim Philippines, 1899-1913

By Ronald K. Edgerton

Provides a play-by-play account of a crucial but often overlooked period in the development of American counterinsurgency strategy.

Tracing Pershing's military campaigns in the Philippines, Ronald K. Edgerton examines how Progressive Counterinsurgency doctrine evolved in direct response to the first sustained military encounter between the United States and Muslim militants. In light of Pershing's military success, this study calls for a re-evaluation of the more invasive counterinsurgency methods used by US officers against Muslim militants today, and it addresses the important role the Philippine-American War played in developing modern US military strategy.

Offers a detailed portrait of life's daily hardships in the rebel capital during the American Civil War.

Towards Nationalizing Regimes Central Eurasia in Context

Conceptualizing Power and Identity in the Post-Soviet Realm

By Diana T. Kudaibergenova

A comparative study of Latvia and Kazakhstan.

The collapse of the Soviet Union famously opened new venues for the theories of nationalism and the study of processes and actors involved in these new nation-building processes. In this comparative study, Kudaibergenova takes the new states and nations of Eurasia that emerged in 1991, Latvia and Kazakhstan, and seeks to better understand the phenomenon of post-Soviet states tapping into nationalism to build legitimacy. This book finds surprising similarities in two such apparently different countries – one “western” and democratic, the other “eastern” and dictatorial.

The Bukharan Crisis

Central Eurasia in Context

A Connected History of 18th Century Central Asia

By Scott C. Levi

A broad revisionist account of central Asian history (1500-1800).

In the first half of the eighteenth century, Central Asia's Bukharan Khanate descended into a crisis from which it would not recover. Bukharans suffered failed harvests and famine, a severe fiscal downturn, invasions from the north and the south, rebellion, and then revolution. To date, efforts to identify the cause of this crisis have focused on the assumption that the region became isolated from early modern globalising trends. This book exposes that explanation as a flawed relic of early Orientalist scholarship on the region.

The 1905 Revolution and the Origins of Modern Polish Politics

By Wiktor Marzec

The unsuccessful 1905 revolution and the case of Russian-ruled Poland.

This book explores the change of the public sphere in Russian Poland during the 1905 Revolution. The 1905 Revolution was one of the few bottom-up political transformations and general democratisations in Polish history. It was a popular rebellion fostering political participation of the working class. The infringement of previously carefully guarded limits of the public sphere triggered a powerful conservative reaction among the commercial and landed elites, and frightened the intelligentsia. Polish nationalists promised to eliminate the revolutionary "anarchy" and gave meaning to the sense of disappointment after the revolution.

Film, Document, and Ritual in Russia's Contested Memory of World War II

By Jeremy Hicks

Explores how the Soviets, and then Putin, have used this iconic image to build a remarkably powerful mythology of Russian greatness.

In one of the most iconic images from World War II, a Russian soldier raises a red flag atop the ruins of the German Reichstag on April 30, 1945. Known as the Victory Banner, this piece of fabric has come to symbolise Russian triumph, glory, and patriotism. This book examines how and why this symbol was created, the changing media of its expression, and the contested evolution of its message. From association with Stalinism and communism to its acquisition of Russian nationalist meaning, Jeremy Hicks demonstrates how this symbol was used to construct a collective Russian memory of the war.

Coercion and Consent in the Bolivian Barracks

By Elizabeth Shesko

The first comprehensive history of the military's role in Bolivian state formation.

Military service in Bolivia has long been compulsory for young men. Drawing on a body of internal military records never before used by scholars, Elizabeth Shesko argues that conscription evolved into a pact between the state and society. Shesko contends that state formation built around military service has been characterised in Bolivia by multiple layers of negotiation and accommodation. The resulting nation-state was and is still hierarchical and divided by profound differences, but it never was simply an assimilatory project. It instead reflected a dialectical process to define the state and its relationships.

Growing Up Jewish in a Christian World

By Arthur Ullian

A thoughtful, historically-grounded, and often humorous memoir, interweaving personal experience with an exploration of the roots of ethnic stereotypes and antisemitism.

Following a life-changing accident that left him paralysed, Arthur Ullian began to realise that not only did life in a wheelchair make him feel "different," but he had always felt like an outsider, having grown up Jewish in the elite WASP world of prep schools, cotillion classes, and restricted clubs. He also came to see that over the course of his life he had, paradoxically, internalised the prevailing Christian view of the "Jewish character" and unconsciously attempted to replicate the social and material trappings of those who excluded him.

Inside the Verse Novel

Writers on Writing

By Linda Weste

A Poet explores the uniqueness of storytelling through poetry and the verse novel genre.

In these twenty-two interviews with verse novelists from the UK, USA, Australia and Canada, Linda Weste explores storytelling through poetry and the genre of the verse novel. Her subjects are notable representatives of countries where the genre thrives – among them is Bernardine Evaristo, joint winner of the Booker Prize in 2019 – and what they have to say enriches our understanding of the many ways poetry and narratives can meld to create a unique reading experience.

Rooms in the City

By Nicholas Hasluck

Athens, November 1915. When a British counter espionage unit is contacted by a man from Smyrna, it seems that a bold new plan is afoot to cut through the Turkish defences at Gallipoli.

A city buffeted by the chaos of the war, a city swarming with spies and opportunists. Australian-born agent Robert Kaub is drawn into an investigation and is soon forced to confront memories of love and betrayal in pre-war Athens. An ominous note, an old coin from Ephesus, cryptic cables – Robert's discoveries bring him eventually to a place where things could go either way for the Allied cause. Aegean battlefields. A besieged city. Deaths foretold. These are mirrored in a mystery shaped by the ill-fated attempt to capture Constantinople, a story tinted by the truths and untruths of war, a tragic tale akin to myth.

Old Old Age

A Brief Guide

By Ian Hansen

Insights into the world of the elderly, dealing with frailty, loss, loneliness and death, but it is far from being gloomy.

This is about the 'old old', not the physically lively sixty- and seventy-year-olds, but octogenarians having a voice. The eighties are when it all begins to crumble. The author is a literary man and he uses extracts from novels and poems to help to explore the idea of growing old. He balances lightness and seriousness and this book will have an acute relevance for its older readers.

David Campbell

A Life of the Poet

By Jonathan Persse

David Campbell was one of Australia's finest lyric poets. A writer, war hero and grazier, he published 11 books of poems and short stories, and was a regular contributor to The Bulletin.

Born into a landed family, David Campbell (1915-79) was a grazier for most of his life in the Canberra and Bungendore district of the Monaro, Australia. He fought with the RAAF in the Second World War, rising to the rank of wing commander, and he was twice awarded a Distinguished Flying Cross. Life on the land, writing, and wide friendships, followed. His poetry, much of it, was inspired by his love of the land, in all its forms, and by his belief in the unity of all things in nature.
